Case Study

Mohamad Kusulia, a young boy from Nirgundi village in Rayagada, grew up watching his parents struggle every single day. His father, a daily wage labourer, and his mother, a homemaker, did everything they could—but with an annual income of just ₹48,000, life was a constant battle for basic needs.

School was 7 km away with no proper transport. Some days, Mohamad walked the entire stretch barefoot. He couldn't afford notebooks, meals were uncertain, and dreams felt too expensive to even imagine.

But everything changed when Shakti Balashram stepped in.

Here, Mohamad found more than just education. He found a home. He received school materials, regular meals, coaching, care, and most importantly—hope. In a place where he was once just surviving, he started living, learning, and dreaming.

Today, Mohamad stands tall in Class 10, determined to become a teacher. His eyes now hold dreams bigger than his village—and that's all because someone believed in him.

“I don’t just want to change my life,” he says with quiet courage, “I want to light the way for others like me.”

Shakti didn't just support a child; they rewrote his future—with love, dignity, and endless belief.
